

A Note from FRANZ WISNER
author, How the World Makes Love (www.howtheworldmakeslove.com)

Hello. My name is Franz Wisner; and I'm a professional dumpee. Yes, it's true. Only in America, can someone get left at the altar and turn it into a career.

You see, after my fiancée left me just days before our wedding, I went ahead with the wedding weekend anyway, just without that whole bride part.

I then asked my recently divorced brother to join me on the pre-paid honeymoon to Costa Rica. We had such a good time we decided to extend the honeymoon...for two years and 53 countries!

I avoided going back to real work by writing a book about the series of events called, you guessed it, Honeymoon with My Brother. And thanks to book clubs across the country, the book did well. Some book clubs dressed up in wedding whites and served champagne. Others hosted my brother and me with foods and wines from around the world. A few partied so hard they never asked my about the book at all. We loved every minute.

There was still one problem, though. Throughout the honeymoon, I squandered a world of opportunity; and I came back to America single. I then compounded the problem by moving to the worst place on the planet to be single—Los Angeles. Help!

So I grabbed my brother and hit the road again, traveling to Brazil, Egypt, India, the Czech Republic, Nicaragua, New Zealand, and Botswana with a mission: to glean the planet's most important love lessons and see if it could rescue me from the ruins of my own love life.

That's the story of our new book, How the World Makes Love (www.howtheworldmakeslove.com). Kurt and I spent a year gathering insights and stories from heart-broken singles and happily married couples, urbanites and villagers, spooners and spoonees about the most important, and bizarre, topic on earth. Love.

They made me re-evaluate everything I thought I knew about love, and propelled me to do something really foreign.

How the World Makes Love hits bookstores on March 17, and Kurt and I hit the road shortly thereafter for a national promotional tour. Come say hello if we're doing something near you. Bring the whole book club. We'll keep the champagne on ice.
